SENATORS READY

Washington, September 9.—With the tariff bill out of the way in the Senate, members of that body are preparing for a late summer vacation, and those who have been hungering since early days of spring for a chance to fish or motor or pass their time in ease in other ways, are now ready to see their wishes gratified. Since the House passed the tariff bill in May and passed it up to the Senate for such tinkering as the upper house might see fit to do, there has been practically no opportunity for its members to get away from Washington for anything more than week-end trips, and not many of these have been taken.
